Let's say I would like to pass a string value to the View. For that I need the name of the model which stores the string value. The string is stored in a context variable. string Genre = (Context.Item.Genre == null? string.Empty : Context.Item.Genre).ToString(); So now the string value is stored in the Model Context.Item.Genre. Now when I try to retrieve the view, the Model Context.Item is null. How can I get to this Model? My View page is like this:
@Html.Partial("_GenreList") A: If the view is defined within the context of a controller, then you have access to the controller directly. @Controller public class HomeController { public ActionResult Index() { var genreList = Context.Item.GenreList; return View(genreList); } } Actions 6-year-old rescued after being left behind in Oceanside gym Zachary James was left in a hot, enclosed space for about three hours after gym class Posted: 3:46 AM, May 30, 2017 Updated:2017-05-30 16:56:01Z By: KTVB Oceanside, CA SAN DIEGO (KUSI) — Zachary James was the name of the boy who was mistakenly left behind in a gym class.
